

2006 The 12th MAN

Chardonnay

TASTE FOOD & WINE 2008 Mathew Jukes & Tyson Stelzer,

“The age of the fat-arsed Australian Chardonnay is now well and truly over-phew! This wine is the final nails in its coffin. Welcome to a new era of precious, crafted Chardys which rebound around your palate with a new found energy and momentum hitherto unknown! The 12th Man is lithe and wiry, without an ounce of fat, and as accurate as a surgeon’s blade.”

90 POINTS

“This wine prompted the widest imaginable sensory perception, with separate judges noting gingery oak, almost toast, and even gherkin-like aromas! The palate is more conventional, with ripe fruits, some flavours then a toasty finish.”
