“... dense liquorice, chocolate fudge, dark berries and just a little alcohol lift. It’s a very solid, rich and concentrated nose, perhaps a little obvious for some but that obviousness is more just regional character to me. The palate too is utterly Vale derived, with more chocolate fudge-mocha rich fruit and oak, built full bodied, rich and decadent with that lovely tarry/red berried middle that the Vale does so well. Long, even, ripe and powerful...”

“... plum and chocolate licorice bullets punctuated by vivid raspberry and cinnamon dusted blue fruit. There’s a real sense of freshness balancing the regional generosity and the framework also impresses; a nice line of acid and please chalky tannin. Well seasoned with nutmeg, pepper and a good dose of mocha oak.”
